English Language and Literature 2017/2018

Paper 1

Text types

Yi Kai Ng

OPINION COLUMN

DESCRIPTION

An article published in a newspaper or magazine, that reflects the author's opinion about the subject

Don't be afraid to ask

GETTING CONSUMERS TO ENDORSE YOUR PRODUCT IS EASIER THAN YOU THINK - ALL YOU HAVE TO DO IS ASK, WRITES ADAM FERRIER.

I WAS visiting MONA (The Museum of Old and New Art) in Tasmania one weekend recently (as an aside, please go there now. If not today, then this weekend - it's a must), and went to the markets outside that pop up every Saturday.

Being a person naturally low in energy and self-motivation, I noticed a stall selling 'ice-brewed coffee' called Rocket. I was tempted to try one (dairy free, great taste, very refreshing) and got talking to the stall owner.

He asked me where he knows me from, and had I been on TV? (This is not a situation that happens to me that often.) We established that he had seen me on (the insightful, entertaining, and must-see TV show) Gruen Planet. And then he got a little excited.

"I love that show," he said. "You're not Todd or Russel, are you?" (This was weird as it's kind of obvious I'm not.) "But can I take a photo of you drinking Rocket?" he asked.

To cut this part of the story short, it ended with me saying 'yes', and the stall owner taking a photo of me drinking Rocket. He then tweeted the photo with the caption "@adamferrier trying his first Rocket". I then retweeted it, giving him exposure to 5,000-plus followers. I then walked away thinking that was hilarious - my first product endorsement.

It was only about 10 seconds afterwards that I realised it wasn't really a product endorsement at all, as that implies I was paid - and I wasn't. Which begged the question, why did I do it? Now there are only two possible explanations to this: a) I liked the guy, and his drink, and wanted to help him out; or b) I liked the idea he wanted me to endorse his product and it appealed to my vainglorious side.

Anyone who knows me, even vaguely, will know immediately that option B is the most likely. So what have I learnt from this relatively benign event?

1. The best way to get someone to like your brand is to get people to do something for you. This is something I've known for years, but to experience it first hand as a consumer was extremely powerful. Stop trying to sell the benefits of what you sell to other people - get people to sell your benefits to others (like I did with Rocket). It's relatively easy - all you have to do is ask (and have a good enough product or idea that makes them want to get involved).

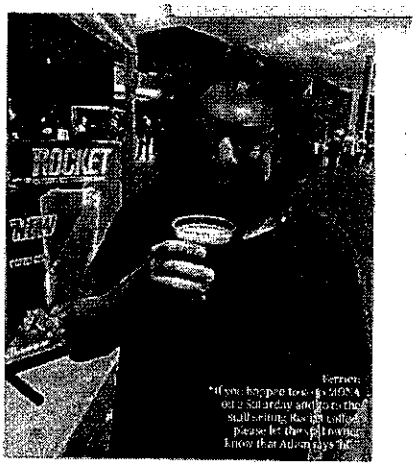

2. Getting people to endorse you or do something for you is pretty easy. Again, all you have to do is ask. I once asked Malcolm Gladwell if he'd have dinner with me and some clients. He said he had nothing else on that night (he was in town anyway) and sure, he'd love to. It was a very memorable evening. Most people are prepared to help most of the time. Again, just ask.

3. I'm vain, but then I'm not that different to you. I read recently that the brands that win in the future won't be looking for fame themselves, but will instead be making their consumers famous. I love this thought.

4. The bigger we get, the less favours we ask. This guy who had the stall was asking everyone to promote the drink (I'm not vain enough to think his ploy was just for me). However, the bigger we get as a business the less likely we are to ask for help (indeed, the more others are asking us for help instead). Think small, and don't lose the humility to ask for help. People will like you more because of it.

5. Lists need to be in threes, fives or tens. I didn't learn this that day, but it comes in useful to add this fact if you only have two, four or nine points to make.

So if you happen to go to MONA on a Saturday and go to the stall selling Rocket coffee, please let the stall owner know (I'm pretty sure his name was Michael) that Adam says 'hi'. ●

Adam Ferrier is founding partner of Naked Communications

CHECKLIST

- Voice
- Newsworthy
- Call to Action
- Humour
- Hard Facts
- Logos

AUDIENCE & PURPOSE

- People interested in a particular subject and wants to hear different opinions on that subject.
- To express the author's opinion on the subject, hence lots of use of tones.

LANGUAGE

- Informal
- Many uses of humour

Text type: News report

Formal and informative piece

Short title (encapsulates idea of text)

Singapore is world's 20th biggest arms exporter

New report always consists of 5Ws and 1H

Introduction (Short brief outline of 5W1H)

Where

What

SINGAPORE is now the world's 20th biggest arms exporter, having jumped 11 places in a year, new figures for last year reveal.

When

Body (Most of the key information)

Who (Ethos) Adds credibility

Think-tank Stockholm International Peace Research Institute (Sipri) found the volume of exports of major conventional weapons from Singapore leapt from a trend-indicator value (TIV) of 12 million in 2011 to 76 million. TIV is a common unit created by Sipri and, although based on the known unit production costs of a core set of arms, it is not representative of the financial value of the transfer.

Evidence*/Dat (Adds credibilit

Defence specialists told The Straits Times this surge reflects the industry's growing capabilities. "Through the pursuit of military innovations that more countries are recognising, Singapore has been improving its global competitiveness in the defence market," said Dr Michael Raska, research fellow at the S. Rajaratnam School of International Studies.

How

Who

What

Executive director of the International Institute for Strategic Studies (Asia) Tim Huxley called Singapore's breakthrough into the top 20 "quite an achievement" given its small size and history of lower arms exports. He noted that, rather than a trend, the sharp increase is "best treated as a spike" resulting from several recent large sales. He added that Singapore has a "limited range of defence products, none of which are particularly expensive".

Direct quote* (adds credibility)

Position*(ethos) (adds credibility)

What

Who

Sipri's arms trade database is put together with information culled mainly from governments, the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms and military trade publications. It shows Singapore's recent exports include a £150 million (S$286 million) delivery of 115 Broncos (armoured personnel carriers) to Britain for its troops in Afghanistan and 10 to Thailand. An Endurance amphibious assault landing ship was also sold to Thailand in a $200 million deal and delivered last year. Singapore also made sizeable deliveries to Africa, selling six light helicopters to Chad and two patrol craft to Nigeria.

What

The Republic does not have the local demand to justify making bigger items like submarines, said Dr Huxley, which is why the city-state will never be a huge player. While it is the third largest Asian exporter behind China and South Korea, the United States, Russia, and Germany have consistently been among the top arms exporters worldwide.

Who

But Dr Raska said Singapore's boost in rankings "is part of a trend that will continue going forward as (it) wants to strengthen its global position".

Position*/Job*(ethos (adds credibility)

Military publication IHS Jane's Asia-Pacific defence industry analyst Jon Grevatt added: "Singapore is regarded as a trusted supplier, unlike other countries in the region, and has the funding and the base to grow and develop military technology."

Sipri data also shows Singapore remained the world's fifth largest arms importer, securing 4 per cent of the global arms imports from 2008 to last year just as it did from 2007 to 2011.

Evidence*/Data (Adds credibility

hpeishan@sph (Writer's details)

EULOGY

Definition: a speech or piece of writing that praises someone or something highly, especially a tribute to someone who has just died.

Example of a Eulogy:

Dad was the light of my life.

Even as a little girl, I remember him making me laugh so much I would nearly cry. He had a wicked sense of humour that rubbed off on anyone that was near him.

No one was upset around Dad for too long—although he did have his serious side, too, of course.

Dad grew up in the country, on a dairy farm a few hours from Melbourne called Toora and was surrounded by sheep, farm animals and beautiful landscape.

But his love for the written word drew him to the 'big smoke' to study literature at Trinity College in Melbourne.

He said his passion came from his grandfather who used read endlessly to him. Stories that even as an adult he loved dearly and would read to us when we were kids. His favourites were Moby Dick and Tom Sawyer.

My parents met at Trinity College and after graduating, decided to get married.

Two years later I was born, followed by my brother Charlie a year after that.

Dad was always so caring and giving to us children. Even when we ran in and out of his office a million times interrupting his writing, Dad never got too angry.

He would usher us away with suggestions of how we could occupy ourselves—always with creative and new ideas.

Dad was also inspirational to us, with his passion for music. He loved most types,

.

.

Every couple of months the family would receive invitations to one of his infamous week-ends away. He would find a mystery location—always near a river or the ocean, and send us directions at the last minute.

We were prepared, as we had learnt years ago what the week-end would involve.

We would pack everything needed to go swimming, fishing, snorkelling, or if in the winter months bush walks and sightseeing—it was always a week-end of fun and activity.

Times that we all and especially the grandchildren will never forget.

Dad: Your love, your patience, your understanding, your wisdom and your amazing sense of humour will live on inside us forever.

You have given us gifts that are more precious than anything in this world.

Goodbye, Dad. You will always live on in my heart.

Comment [G(AZ-S1]: 3rd person point of view

Comment [G(AZ-S2]: Interesting early childhood days

Comment [G(AZ-S3]: Likes and dislikes

Comment [G(AZ-S4]: Academic

Comment [G(AZ-S5]: School attended

Comment [G(AZ-S6]: Details about marriage, family, children

Comment [G(AZ-S7]: Make notes of memories, special moments together.

Comment [G(AZ-S8]: What people will miss about the person

Comment [G(AZ-S9]: The ending is the most important part. The last thing that people hear will remain with them throughout the day. Make sure to include other people so they could feel connected.

INTERVIEW

[Ellen DeGeneres]
Alright, after having the biggest song of the summer, it was no surprise that our next guest CD debuted at number 1, she was nominated for two VMA's tonight, please welcome the lovely Katy Perry.

Comment [R(CPR-S1]: Using key points of the person's achievements captivate the audience

Comment [R(CPR-S2]: Addressing the Interviewee to the audience

[Audience]
(claps and applauds)

[Ellen DeGeneres]
Hi, Katy Perry.

[Katy Perry – Katheryn Elizabeth Hudson (born October 25, 1984)]
I feel like this is one of those drunken tattoo type dresses that you will regret

[Ellen DeGeneres]
Ah, ha

[Katy Perry]
That you just didn't have enough time to do your left(arm)

[Audience]
(claps and applauds and scream)

Comment [RL3]: Interactive audience allow a more lively conversation with the interviewee

[Katy Perry]
Hi!

[Ellen DeGeneres]
We do love you Katy and I heard…

[Katy Perry]
And I love you, I'm so excited to be in a chair next to you, your one of my icons.

[Ellen DeGeneres]
Ah, well

[Audience]
(claps and applauds)

[Katy Perry]
She's funny and I love a girl that's funny. that's hard to come by.

[Ellen DeGeneres]
You love a girl that's funny and a guy that's funny.

[Katy Perry]
Of course.

[Ellen DeGeneres]
Your fiance is hilarious!

Comment [RL4]: Introducing a topic to fluently continue the conversation and ask questions

[Katy Perry]
Thank you.

[Ellen DeGeneres]
And you're wearing him on your nails.

[Katy Perry]
Never a dull moment.

[Katy Perry]
Ah, ya. I'm wearing him on my nails. He couldn't be here tonight so I asked

[Ellen DeGeneres]
Where is he?

Comment [RL5]: Beginning to ask simple questions

[Katy Perry]
He's actually in New York filming Arthur which is a movie

[Ellen DeGeneres]
That's right, I love that he's remaking that, he's going to be brilliant

Comment [RL6]: Complimenting the interviewee to provide a lighter mood and make the person more cheerful

[Katy Perry]
Ya.

[Katy Perry]
Thank you.

[Ellen DeGeneres]
Here's what I did, so when you're not with me. I gave you stuff (hand cut out) – for your nails to

Comment [RL7]: Giving a gift that related to another topic to produce a smooth transition to the next topic

[Katy Perry]
That's so great.

Text Types: Novels and Short Stories

Novels	Short Stories

Definitions

A fictitious prose narrative of book length, typically representing character and action with some degree of realism.

Short Story: a story with a fully developed theme but significantly shorter and less elaborate than a novel.

Layout

Chapters are started with a large header sometimes accompanied with a picture. The rest of the chapter is done in paragraphs.

Large header for title, rest of the story is done in paragraphs with decorative pictures relevant to the text.

Conventions

- Characters working to resolve a conflict
- Series of complications set off
- 2-3 moments of high tension

Similar to novels, characters working to resolve a conflict, repetition of a theme and a single moment of high tension.

Audience and Purpose

The audience depends mainly on the topic of the novel.
The purpose of the novel is mainly to entertain the readers.

Similar to novels, the audience depends mainly on the topic.
The purpose is also to entertain the readers.

By Brendan Tan

Text Types: Novels and Short Stories

Novels	Short Stories

Language

Depends on topic, but may have frequent verb usage, specific sentence structure, as well as deliberately inaccurate grammar.

Same as novel, and leaves a single but impactful message, uses repetition, foreshadowing and a single and crucial conflict.

Checklist

- Genre and Title
- Point of View
- Idea of Storyline

- Main Characters and Introduction
- Description of Characters (1st and 3rd Person)
- Description of Settings
- Symbolic Element to Characters

- Internal Character Conflicts
- External Plot Conflicts

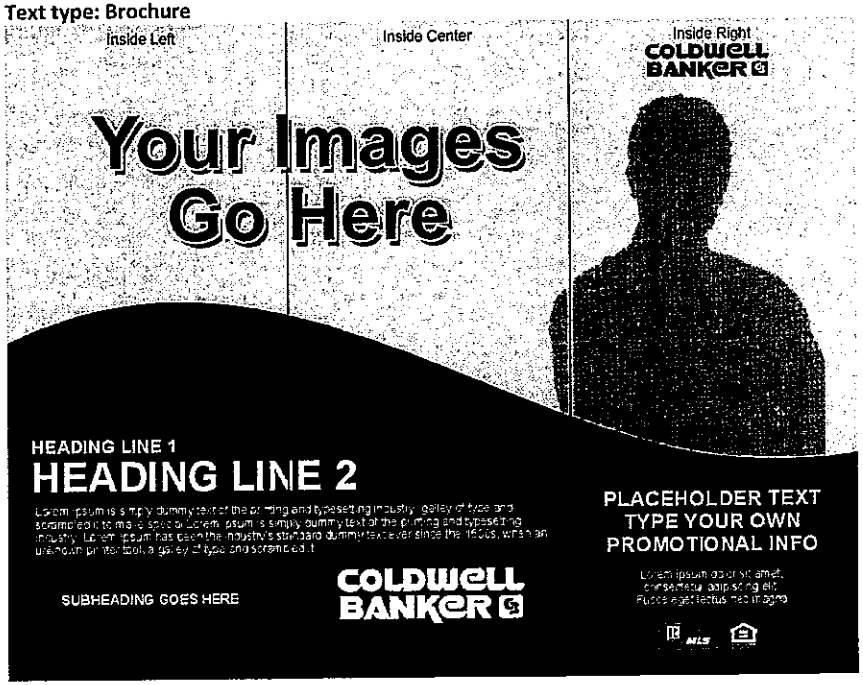

- Interesting and relevant title
- Point of View
- Theme
- Clear Storyline

- Good hook for first paragraph
- Main Characters and their Development
- Clear Structure

- All parts sufficiently explained

By Brendan Tan

Text type: Brochure

Functions: Brochures are used primarily to give a thorough explanation of one specific subject, to convey information and regulations. Almost anything that requires details can be covered.

Context of use: Brochures can be used as an explanation of the nature and composition of an organization. They can also be used as promotional or advertising materials, such as marketing one's company, products, area of interest and so on.

Linguistic characteristics: Brevity and clarity are the characteristics of a successful brochure as it usually gives a brief picture of the conference, service, or cause they are promoting. Descriptive words, with non-jargon filled text, are used so that readers will find it easier to get a concrete understanding of the company and the products, etc. Brochures, especially the ones used for advertising, often use elaborated, abstract vocabulary items with favorable connotation. The use of tone, whether it is impersonal or personal, usually depends on the nature and the content of the brochure.

Format and layout: Text in brochures is presented in chunks and is separated by white spaces. Layout is usually organized from left to right and top to bottom. Variation in type size and the use of bullets, boxes, and visual devices, such as graphs, tables, charts, illustrations and diagrams are commonly used in brochures. They can greatly enhance the brochures' 1 attractiveness as well as the effectiveness of the text so that it will be more readable and pleasing to readers.

Ways of organizing information: Usually, there is/are front cover headline(s) to provoke readers' interests and curiosity to read the brochure. An introductory paragraph or a separate introduction section can be found in the beginning as an overview of the brochure to tell readers what they are going to read in the following sections. There will be various sections, separated by headings and subheadings, targeting specific items in the body. At the back cover of the brochure, there is often more information written in providing ways for contacts.

Tabloid Article

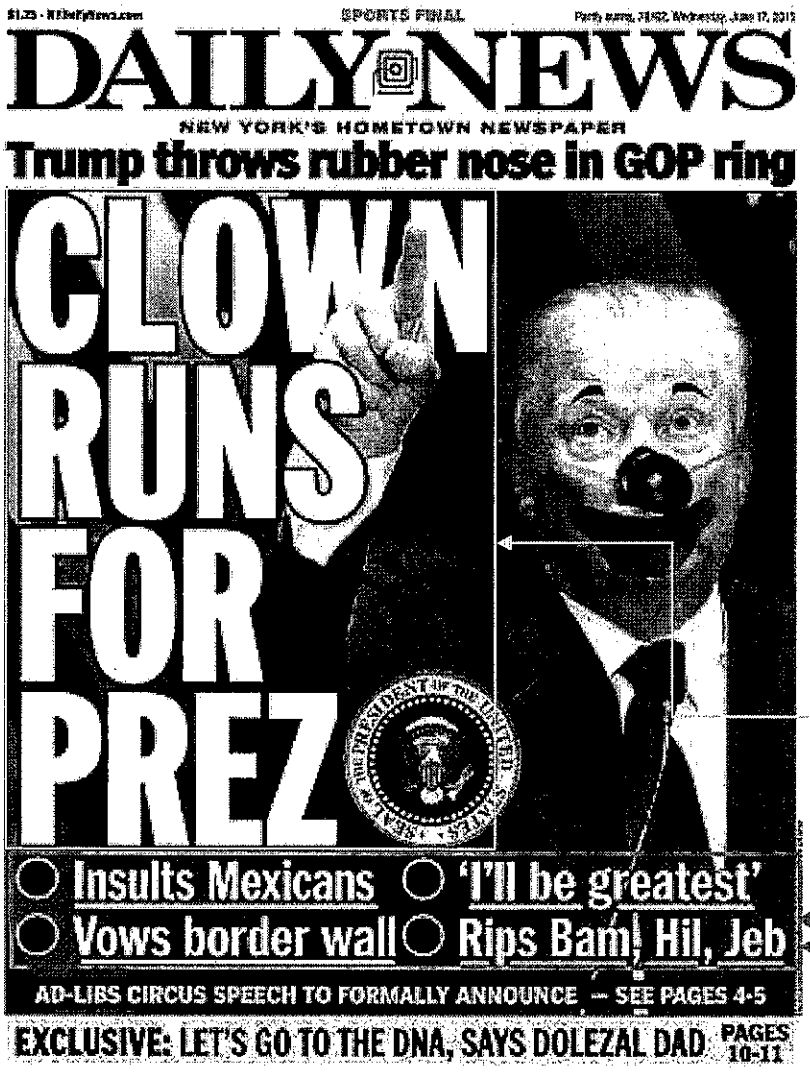

Tabloid, or tabloid newspaper, can have several meanings. In the technical sense, tabloid refers to a type of newspaper that typically measures 11 X 17 inches, which is smaller and narrower than a broadsheet newspaper. Tabloid can also mean a newspaper that focuses on splashy, lurid stories about celebrities and crimes, such as the so-called supermarket tabloids. (Rogers)

Visual Layout
-Funny
-Eye Catching
Textual Layout
-Usually 16-30 words
-Large in words for audience to pick out the content easily
-Colourful adjective

Checklist

- Is it biased?
- Is it based on rumours?
- Are the sentences short?
- Do they have interesting, shocking and appealing headlines?
- Is it humorous?
- Is it eye-catching?

Commonly found:
-Advice/Comment sections.
-Joke section.
-Advertising section.
-Clothes section.

For more info visit:

- http://acsenglish.tripod.com/tabloids04.html
- http://amysdf.blogspot.sg/2010/11/tabloid-and-broadsheet.html

Conventions

-Lurid (Bright in colour to create an unnatural effect)

-Brief to make it understandable and not boring

Audience
-people who dislike Trump
-People interested in gossips
Purpose
-To ruin Donald's reputation

Language

-Exaggerated and funny

-No repetition of words

-Moralizing tone

Examples of stylistic devices commonly used:

Alliteration
Cliché
Euphemism
Expletives
Metaphor
Metonym
Mis-spelling Words
Pun
Rhetorical question

Text Type: Letter Of Apology

Definition:
A letter of apology is a formal writing, which is used to express a person's regret and guilt towards a past action. This writing is to allow the writer to write down his feelings and try to make a positive change from a negative action.

Below shows an example of a public/cooperate letter of apology:

To our customers,

At Apple, we strive to make world-class products that deliver the best experience possible to our customers. With the launch of our new Maps last week, we fell short on this commitment. We are extremely sorry for the frustration this has caused our customers and we are doing everything we can to make Maps better.

We launched Maps initially with the first version of iOS. As time progressed, we wanted to provide our customers with even better Maps including features such as turn-by-turn directions, voice integration, Flyover and vector-based maps. In order to do this, we had to create a new version of Maps from the ground up.

There are already more than 100 million iOS devices using the new Apple Maps, with more and more joining us every day. In just over a week, iOS users with the new Maps have already searched for nearly half a billion locations.

The more our customers use our Maps the better it will get and we greatly appreciate all of the feedback we have received from you.

While we're improving Maps, you can try alternatives by downloading map apps from the App Store like Bing, MapQuest and Waze, or use Google or Nokia maps by going to their websites and creating an icon on your home screen to their web app.

Everything we do at Apple is aimed at making our products the best in the world. We know that you expect that from us, and we will keep working non-stop until Maps lives up to the same incredibly high standard.

Tim Cook
Apple's CEO

Comment [N1]: Greeting:
To/Dear Target Audience
Doesn't want to beat around the bush
(Reassuring the customers that solving the issue is more important than dwelling on the past)

Comment [N2]: Shows their credibility
Shows reassurance
Tells audience that a small mistake should be forgiven since they have been making "world class products" for a long time

Comment [N3]: Makes sure that the apple company is one collected unit.
Gain customers trust once again

Comment [N4]: Direct statement of apology, telling the audience that they know what they have done wrong.

Comment [N5]: Try to make themselves sound more knowledgeable and sound more impressive.

Comment [N6]: Statistics

Comment [N7]: Shows the emotional relationship between them and the customers

Comment [N8]: End on a positive note:
Give a sense of reassurance to the customers.

Comment [N9]: Sign off:
Name

Position

Structure and Layout:

→ Greeting to Target Audience

→ Introduction: Reason of writing this letter of apology (the problem)

- The audience needs to know if the company understands what they have done wrong.

→ Body: Reassure Target audience

- Talk about the company's reputations throughout the years
- Give some example of what the writer can do to improve the situation. (How they are going to correct the wrong action) (The solution)

→ Conclusion: Sum up all the points that were made in the letter

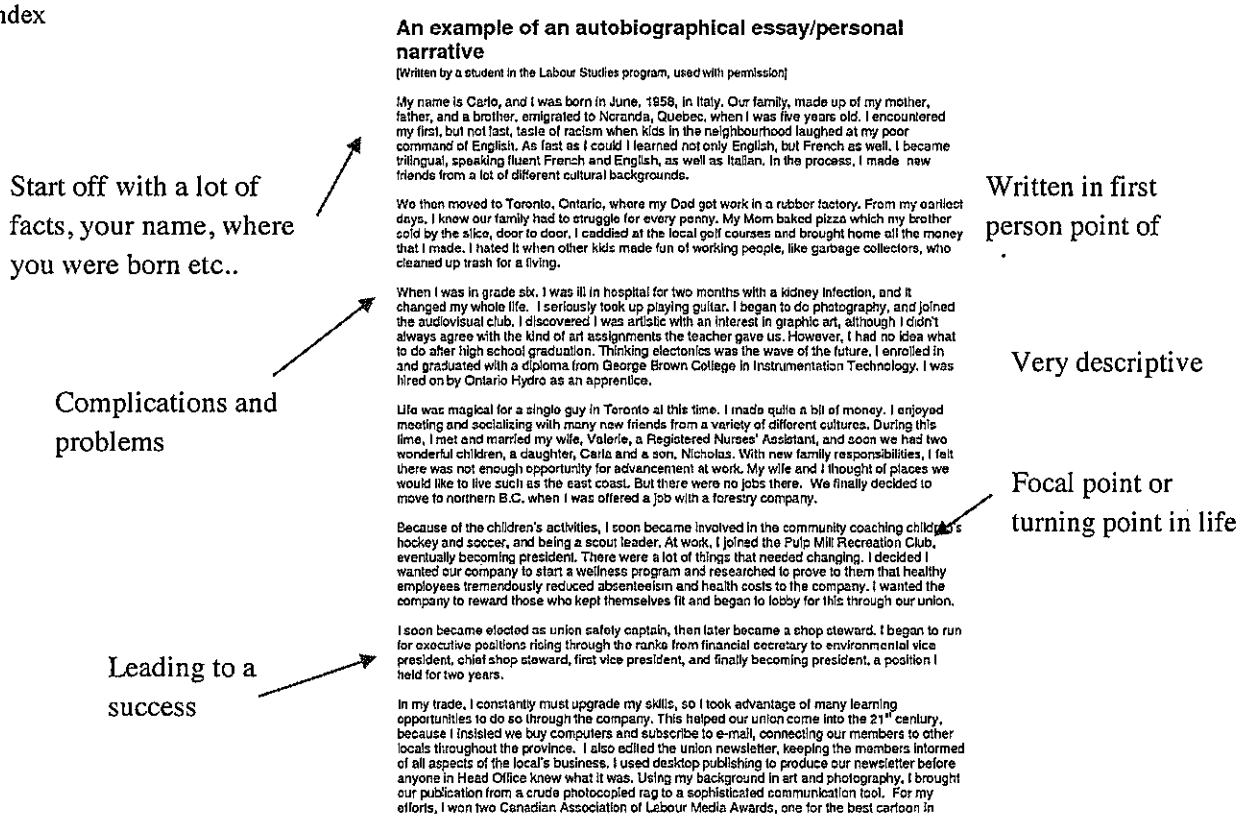

→ Sign off: Name .... Position

AUTOBIOGRAPHY

is a life account written by the person themselves

- Purpose- to inform people about details of a person's life usually on a famous or important person.
- Audience- an autobiography do not really have one target audience. it is usually a general account the people who reads an autobiography will ultimately have an interest towards the person
- Structure and layout- organised in a chronological order. it is usually a thick book.
- Visual components- photographs of the person's life

1. Title
2. Dedication
   Someone who has inspired you to become who you are today, maybe someone who has encouraged you to take the initiative or simply a special person that you would like to mention who has made a significant impact on your life. Dedication can include more than one person.
3. Table of contents
4. Acknowledgements
   This is the place to thank everyone who has helped you compile your autobiography from start to finish.
5. Foreword
6. Introduction
   Needs to grab attention, create interest and keep them reading
7. Body
   Create a series of chronological headings and sub headings in your autobiography outline. Write the autobiography based on locations if you have been stationed at many different places throughout your life. Write about one specific event that has been the turning point in your life.
8. Conclusion
   Your final thoughts. Look back on your completed works, think about what you have learnt from the experience and how it has moulded and shaped you.
9. Memorabilia
10. Index

An example of an autobiographical essay/personal narrative

[Written by a student in the Labour Studies program, used with permission]

My name is Carlo, and I was born in June, 1958, in Italy. Our family, made up of my mother, father, and a brother, emigrated to Noranda, Quebec, when I was five years old. I encountered my first, but not last, taste of racism when kids in the neighbourhood laughed at my poor command of English. As fast as I could I learned not only English, but French as well. I became trilingual, speaking fluent French and English, as well as Italian. In the process, I made new friends from a lot of different cultural backgrounds.

We then moved to Toronto, Ontario, where my Dad got work in a rubber factory. From my earliest days, I knew our family had to struggle for every penny. My Mom baked pizza which my brother sold by the slice, door to door. I caddied at the local golf courses and brought home all the money that I made. I hated it when other kids made fun of working people, like garbage collectors, who cleaned up trash for a living.

When I was in grade six, I was ill in hospital for two months with a kidney infection, and it changed my whole life. I seriously took up playing guitar. I began to do photography, and joined the audiovisual club. I discovered I was artistic with an interest in graphic art, although I didn't always agree with the kind of art assignments the teacher gave us. However, I had no idea what to do after high school graduation. Thinking electonics was the wave of the future, I enrolled in and graduated with a diploma from George Brown College in Instrumentation Technology. I was hired on by Ontario Hydro as an apprentice.

Life was magical for a single guy in Toronto at this time. I made quite a bit of money. I enjoyed meeting and socializing with many new friends from a variety of different cultures. During this time, I met and married my wife, Valerie, a Registered Nurses' Assistant, and soon we had two wonderful children, a daughter, Carla and a son, Nicholas. With new family responsibilities, I felt there was not enough opportunity for advancement at work. My wife and I thought of places we would like to live such as the east coast. But there were no jobs there. We finally decided to move to northern B.C. when I was offered a job with a forestry company.

Because of the children's activities, I soon became involved in the community coaching children's hockey and soccer, and being a scout leader. At work, I joined the Pulp Mill Recreation Club, eventually becoming president. There were a lot of things that needed changing. I decided I wanted our company to start a wellness program and researched to prove to them that healthy employees tremendously reduced absenteeism and health costs to the company. I wanted the company to reward those who kept themselves fit and began to lobby for this through our union.

I soon became elected as union safety captain, then later became a shop steward. I began to run for executive positions rising through the ranks from financial secretary to environmental vice president, chief shop steward, first vice president, and finally becoming president, a position I held for two years.

In my trade, I constantly must upgrade my skills, so I took advantage of many learning opportunities to do so through the company. This helped our union come into the 21st century, because I insisted we buy computers and subscribe to e-mail, connecting our members to other locals throughout the province. I also edited the union newsletter, keeping the members informed of all aspects of the local's business. I used desktop publishing to produce our newsletter before anyone in Head Office knew what it was. Using my background in art and photography, I brought our publication from a crude photocopied rag to a sophisticated communication tool. For my efforts, I won two Canadian Association of Labour Media Awards, one for the best cartoon in

Useful links-http://www.creativewriting-prompts.com/autobiography-format.html

Comic Strip

Description:
Juxtaposed pictorial and other images in a deliberate sequence, intended to convey information and/or produce an aesthetic response in the viewer.

Purpose:

- To address the rights of children to live free from stereotypical characteristics which may define their lives.
- To draw attention to stereotyping from birth and the effects of being stripped from freedom of illusion.

Audience:

- Feminists
- Those who enjoy newspaper comic strips
- Equal rights advocate

Layout:

- Panel: The framed image. Offers readers a perspective or point of view on the subjects
- Speech Bubble: Frames around the characters' language.
- Gutter: The space between the panels. Allows readers to 'fill in the blanks' and imagine what happens between panels.
- Camera Angle: The camera position in relation to its subject. Affects the reader's understanding of the subject.
- Transition: Process of closure in the gutter. Eg. Moment to moment, action to action, subject to subject and so on.

Visual Components:

- Emanata: Refers to the teardrops, sweat drops, question marks, or motion lines that are drawn besides characters' faces to portray emotion.
- Style: The drawing style of the artist. Eg. Complex to simple, realistic to iconic, objective to subjective and specific to universal.
- Punchline: The phrase or moment which provides the humor in the comic.

Language:

- Humorous tone
- Descriptive language. "mischievous sparkle", "strong fist", "tough, strong".

COMPLAINT LETTER

Jane Brown [Your name]

21 Holland Avenue [Your address]

S125931

jane@brown.com.au [Email and/or phone]

1 January 2013 [Date]

Dear Manager [Salutation]

RE: COMPLAINT ABOUT FAULTY TELEVISION CABINET PURCHASED AT CABINET WORLD ON 15 DECEMBER 2012 Re: COMPLAINT ABOUT [INSERT NAME OF PRODUCT OR SERVICE] PURCHASED AT [INSERT BUSINESS NAME] ON [INSERT DATE]

I am unhappy with the quality of a television cabinet I bought at 5 Street on 15 December and I am writing to seek a replacement. [State that you have a problem with goods or services bought from the business at a location and date and that you want the problem fixed.]

The cabinet doors do not open and shut properly and the stain on the cabinet is uneven, with one half darker than the other. The cabinet was delivered on 30 December and I noticed this problem as soon as I unpacked it from the box. [Explain the key details of the problem including when you discovered it and any other steps you've already taken to get it fixed, such as a telephone call or a visit to the store. Note who you spoke to and any results of your efforts.]

The cabinet is not of acceptable quality and does not match the sample cabinet I was shown in store. I would like you to replace it with one of the same quality and finish as the sample and arrange for return of the faulty cabinet at no cost [State the steps you want the business to take to fix the problem]

I have attached a photocopy of my receipt as proof of purchase. [State that you have enclosed copies of relevant documents, such as a receipt of bank statement for proof of purchase.]

I would like to have this problem fixed quickly please. If I do not hear from you within 10 days, I will lodge a formal complaint with Consumer Affairs in my state. [State that you expect to hear from the business with a solution by a certain date. Describe what you intend to do if the business fails to fix the problem]

You can contact me on 1234 5678 during working hours or after hours on 123 456 789 to discuss this matter further. [List your business and after hours contact details]

Yours sincerely, [salutation]

Jane Brown [Your name]

Enclosed: Copy of the receipt for television cabinet [Enclosed: Copy of the receipt]

Memoir

Format

1. Title

2. Intro

3. Story

4. Conclusion

Introduction

-Hook your readers with the introduction. You could start with a surprising statement or fact, give some important background information or start with a dialogue in between the main characters.

Story

-Use descriptive words and phrases, making the reader feel like they were present when the action took place.

-Share information about yourself or things you might have in common with the audience. To allow the audience to connect with you, the narrator.

-Add sensory details by using words or descriptions which appeal to our senses to make the memoir more interesting and complete.

-Include dialogue but only important dialogue which has the most impact on the story.

-Reveal the significance of your story in the conclusion and what you learnt from the experience to evoke an emotional response in your readers.

General features

-Written in the first person.

-Writer's thoughts and feelings should be expressed in the memoir.

-Memoir should be written from the main character's point of view.

-Should sound like literature and not a report.

-Readers should be able to live the story, moment by moment, with the characters.

Speech

Definition: The faculty or power of speaking; oral communication; ability to express one's thoughts and emotions by speech sounds and gesture.

Example: Obama's speech

> My parents shared not only an improbable love; they shared an abiding faith in the possibilities of this nation. They would give me an African name, Barack or "blessed," believing that in a tolerant America your name is no barrier to success. They imagined me going to the best schools in the land, even though they weren't rich, because in a generous America you don't have to be rich to achieve your potential. They're both passed away now, and yet I know that on this night they look down on my with great pride. They stand here, and I stand here today, grateful for the diversity of my heritage, aware that my parents' dreams live on in my two precious daughters. I stand here knowing that my story is part of the larger American story.

Purpose of the text type:

The main purpose of a speech is to inspire the targeted audience and also serves as autobiography

What audience does it often target?

It normally targets the audience who are interested in that particular topic or speaker.

Structure/Layout:

The structure of speech is laid out in a way that there is a introduction, Body and closing.

Each area has a specific layout

The introduction is mainly to capture the audience's attention.

The body is where you are supposed to make your claim on where you stand. Either to persuade the audience or teach them.

The closing is mainly to summarize the points that were made and give your audience something to remember about your speech.

Use of language:

The language used is inspirational and in an informative tone.

Examples:

' improbable love'

'give me an African name, Barack or "blessed," believing that in a tolerant America your name is no barrier to success.'

'don't have to be rich to achieve your potential'

'grateful for the diversity of my heritage'

'generous America'

'abiding faith in the possibilities of this nation'

Useful links!

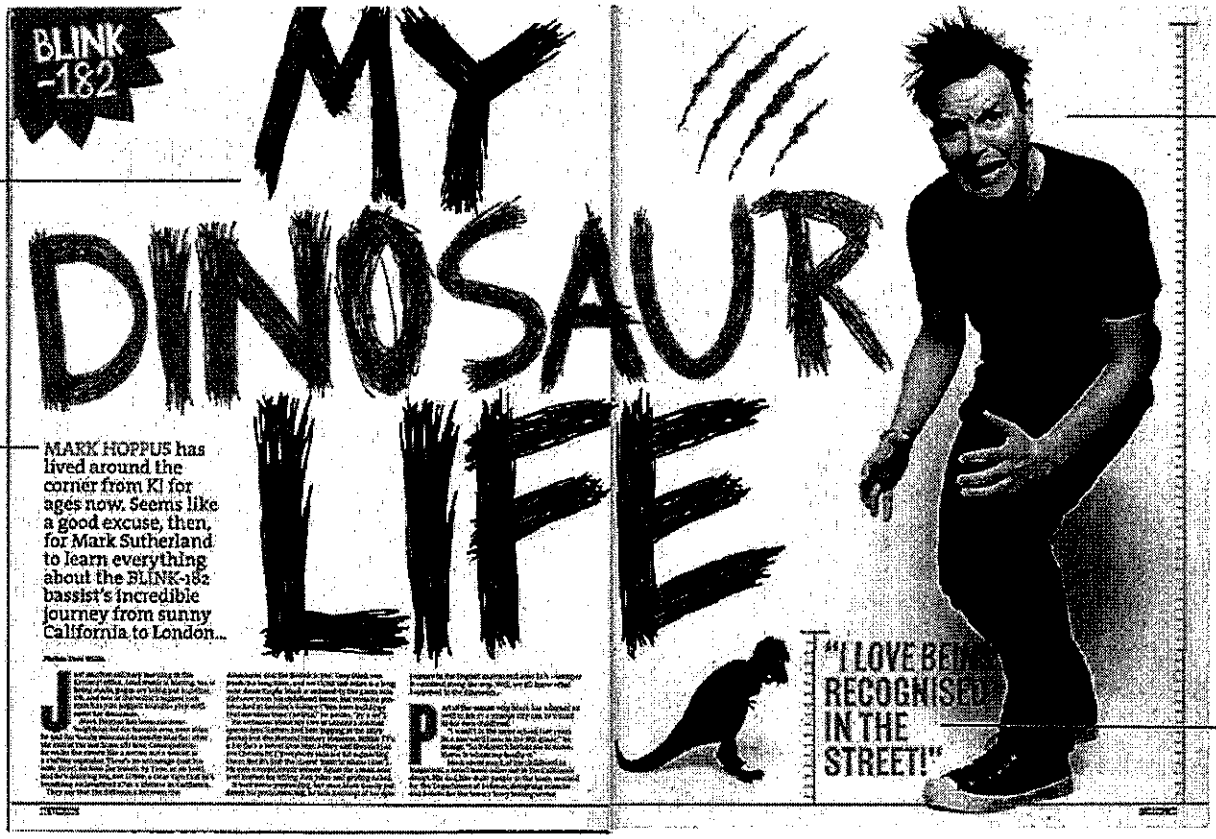

http://teacher.scholastic.com/writewit/speech/tips.htm

https://www.forbes.com/sites/jeffschmitt/2013/07/16/10-keys-to-writing-a-speech/

http://www.bbc.co.uk/bitesize/ks3/english/speaking_listening/speaking/revision/3/

FEATURE ARTICLE

Feature articles are windows into personal human experiences, giving more detail and description than a hard news story. The visual and textual layout is similar to that of a news article except the style of writing is typically casual instead of serious. Features focus on an event or individual, giving the reader insight into some interesting dimension of that subject.

Conventions

1. Large, centralised heading in non-conventional, eye catching font that adds colour and life to the subject
2. Prominent, casual and non-professional picture of the person close to the subject
3. Name of person stands out in different colour
4. Personal quote reflecting belief, philosophy or opinion

Audience & Purpose

Feature articles target specific interest groups and demographics. The topic is very focused on a certain subject. Feature articles serve to share details of recent events regarding a hot topic featuring icons and celebrities that are associated with the interest group. The article brings the celebrity closer to readers, making them more aware and informed of their interests.

For more information: https://www.slideshare.net/gurugeri/how-to-write-effective-feature-articles

www.fed.cuhk.edu.hk/~etenet/TextTypes(PDF)/Feature_Articles.pdf

Personal letter to a friend

Name of writer
Writer's Address
City
Zip code
(Date)

Optional

Dear (first name of recipient),

I hope this letter finds all of you in the best of health and spirits. All of us are also doing fine here. It has been a very long time since we met or wrote to each other. So I thought of penning down a few lines to check things with you.

We just got back from our vacation to Thailand and had a great time. We went to Phuket and Bangkok. Amazing must see places. If you happen to ever plan a holiday to that side of the world do let me know and I shall give you tips on sight-seeing, shopping, etc.

I want to share something that is disturbing me these days. Mom has not been keeping good health and I am really worried for her. Sometimes I see bad dreams about mom and they wake me up in the middle of the night. I am sure you know what bad dreams I am talking about. Please don't share this with anybody and I know I can trust you on this.

Anyways you say what is up with you and how is work? I can see that it is keeping you really busy, as I haven't heard from you at all.

Give my love to your mom and dad and loads of love to you too.

Stay in touch and do write!

Take care

Send your best wishes!

Love/Your friend/Best wishes/Affectionately,

(Name of the writer)

1st paragraph

- Purpose for writing

Subsequent paragraphs

- An experience you'd wish to tell
- Or to share a thought you have

Ending paragraph

- Ask a question (e.g. share some of his/her thoughts on the topic) so that he/she can write back

Language

- ✓ Informal language
- ✓ Personal pronouns (e.g. I, you)

Text Type: Diary/ journal

Saturday January 10th

AM. Now the dog is ill! It keeps being sick so the vet has got to come. My father told me not to tell the vet that the dog had been locked in the coal shed for two days. I have put a plaster over the spot to stop germs getting in it from the dog. The vet has taken the dog away. He says he thinks it has got an obstruction and will need an emergency operation. My grandma has had a row with my mother and gone home. My grandma found the Christmas cardigans all cut up in the duster bag. It is disgusting when people are starving. Mr Lucas from next door has been in to see my mother and father who are still in bed. He brought a 'get well' card and some flowers for my mother. My mother sat up in bed in a nightie that showed a lot of her chest. She talked to Mr Lucas in a yukky voice. My father pretended to be asleep. Nigel brought his records round. He is into punk, but I don't see the point if you can't hear the words. Anyway, I think I'm turning into an intellectual. It must be all the worry.

PM. I went to see how the dog is. It has had its operation. The vet showed me a plastic bag with lots of yukky things in it. There was a lump of coal, the fir tree from the Christmas cake, and the model pirates from my father's ship. One of the pirates was waving a cutlass which must have been very painful for the dog. The dog looks a lot better. It can come home in two days, worse luck. My father was having a row with my grandma on the phone about the empty bottles in the dustbin when I got home. Mr Lucas was upstairs talking to my mother. When Mr Lucas went, my father went upstairs and had an argument with my mother and made her cry. My father is in a bad mood. This means he is feeling better. I made my mother a cup of tea without her asking. This made her cry as well. You can't please some people!

The spot is still there.

Conventions:

1. Day and date
2. Time

Audience + purpose:

1. Recount the writer of what happened on that day e.g. Personal topic
2. Written for the writer himself – personal pronoun and first person application

Language:

1. Simple past tense describing the event not the feeling because the writer knows what he feels.

Visual layout/ textual layout:

1. The text is a short and straight forward
2. Small paragraphs see the original layout (http://english4success.ru/upload/books/1811.pdf)

Checklist:

1. Date & time
2. A lot of fist person application
3. Personal incident/ event – hard to relate to if you are not close relatives
4. Short & simple sentences – Diary is written for the writer

Customer Review

-a report about a product written by a customer on a commercial website to help people decide if they want to buy it.

25
11
Elizabeth W.
Boston, MA

12/20/2013

Before I buy a car I've been using Zipcar for years. There are many pros and cons, but I am very sad about the fact that customers have to pay annual fees especially customers that may use the zipcar only few times a year. Its not fair. Otherwise I think the idea of zipcar is good and environmentally friendly because people that need a car occasionally don't have to buy a vehicle to meet their needs.

Was this review ...?

Useful 1 | Funny | Cool

Bookmark | Send to a Friend | Link to This Review

Comment from Nick M. of Zipcar 12/20/2013 « Hide

Hi Elizabeth,

Thank you so much for your comment. We're so happy to hear that Zipcar has added to your urban mobility without having to own a car.

We recently launched a program where members only pay a monthly membership fee instead of an annual.

Check it out on our website and feel free to message us if you have any questions!

- The Zipcar Boston Team

Profile of the reviewer with picture, name and location. Additional information includes rating of the reviewer.

Rating of the product/ service (usually out of 5)

Date

The review
- What product/ service did the reviewer purchase
- Purpose of the review is to criticise (to raise a problem to a business) or to praise their service or product.
- What tone is the reviewer using to carry out this purpose?
- What phrase did the reviewer use that signifies the product or the experience?

Response of the business
- Words that shows appreciation from the comment
- Attitude of the business towards the comment. If it is a criticise, what is the business doing to encounter it?

Questions to consider:
-did the layout of the review website affect the review? Did it affect the business negatively or positively?
-Did the response of the business solve in problem in the customer review? Does this show the characteristic of the company?

Blog

Text type

A blog is a regularly updated website with an informal approach to the subject matter. In the case of travel blogs, blogs would usually assume an autoreactive role, making suggestions and giving advice onto where to go.

Conventions

HOW TO SPEND 5 DAYS IN BARCELONA ← Title

December 13, 2012 / By NomadicMatt

My first visit to Barcelona was in 2006. I fell in love with the city: the street performers, food (oh, the food!), laid-back lifestyle, history, people, and plethora of activities. (This area includes the highlight of the venue and attracts people who are familiar or want to experience the ambience of Barcelona) Three years later, I returned again. Then a few months ago, I went back with a friend to show her how amazing the city is.

And every time I come back, Barcelona surprises and inspires me anew. Barcelona is like Paris, New York, or Tokyo — there's always something to do, and you'd need a lifetime to do it in.

But as tourists we don't get a lifetime to see a city. We get a few days, maybe a week or two if we're lucky. We see as much as we can before we move on. So for those with limited time, what can we do? How can we maximize our time in a place like Barcelona where there's just so much to see? Well, like I've previously done for Bangkok, New York, Paris, Berlin, and Helsinki, I've created an itinerary to help you organize and maximize your time in this incredible city. (This is to highlight the credibility of the place)

Below is my suggested itinerary for your trip to Barcelona to help you get to know the city's best and most unique attractions, parks, restaurants, and more (plus with travel tips too!):

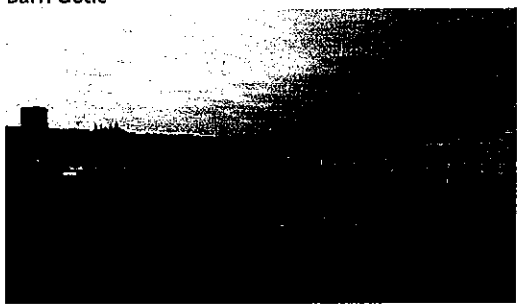

Purpose: The purpose of a blog is to make meaningful suggestions or entries, into the website to display.

Audience: The audience is subjective. The blog usually would appeal to people who find the topic entertaining or telling the experience of a subject or something the blogger did and something the audience would want to do. Blogs are somewhat a personal review of an experience. Therefore Blogs are useful to explore a review of a place, hence travel blogs are fairly common.

Structure and layout

Day 1

Barri Gotic

This is Barcelona's historic center and dates back to pre-Roman times. The area is a maze of tiny streets that turn around on each other and open into lovely squares and plazas.

Highlights include:

- Barcelona History Museum — Barcelona has one of the best city history museums I've ever been to. It does an incredible job of explaining the history and importance of Barcelona and has over 4,000 square meters of Roman ruins located beneath the museum that you can walk through. It's spectacular. There's a free, detailed audio guide and descriptive explanations of what you're seeing. (Description of why it is interesting and why it is a good place to go to)
- Picasso Museum — While I'm not a huge fan of most of Picasso's later work, with over 3,000 pieces of art, this museum has a lot to see, and even I was happy.
- The Gothic Cathedral — Located in the heart of the Barri Gotic, this Gothic cathedral was built on top of an 11th-century church. You can take an elevator up to the roof for sweeping views of the surrounding historic area.

Lunch: La Boqueria – This is the famous central food market in the Barri Gotic and one of the best places to grab lunch in the area. (Watch out for crowds!) (Suggestion of a good place to eat. Usually food would be a major part of the experience in a city and this would help people on what to eat)

The structure is largely comprised of venues and attractions with a short background story or description. But this may not be the case for other blogs. The post about the venue also has a suggestion for a place to eat and has a brief description as well. But the format of blogs can differ and the structure of blogs is only specific to this article.

Visual components:

The visual components are images related to the place, such as buildings food and famous attractions. This would be usually the unique architecture which stands out from what is seen in other cities so that the audience can see a unique side to the place.

Use of language

The blog can be some what authorities and narrative with words like: "I fell in love with the city: the street performers, food (oh, the food!), laid-back lifestyle, history, people, and plethora of activities.

We can see that it tells the story of the author on his trip. He uses narratives like: "I fell in love..." to describe his experience in Barcelona.